CHANGES IN OUR CITY CHARTER. Clark, as dld Messrs. J. T. Harris, Want Special Committee to Pass on Granting Building Permits.

The Committee on Charter Changes held a short session last night, and decided to recommend several minor amendments to the present charter. In the absence from the city of City-Attorney Meredith, the consideration of the bill to create a board of finance was deferred until another meeting.

On motion of Major Allen, the rec mendation of President Caskle concern-ing the appointment of presidents pro for the Common Council and Board of Aldermen was taken up. FEAST OF VETERANS.

AN ELEGANT BANQUET TENDERED THE GRAND CAMP.

INTERESTING TOAST

Judge Christian, Presides.-Gen. Battle, Drs. Jones, and Tucker, Col. Porter, Judge Farrar, Other Speakers Respond.

The veterans of the Grand Camp were entertained at a banquet given in their henor by the citizens and the Confederate organizations of Richmond at Sanger Hall last night. It was nearly 10 o'clock when the last business session of the body closed, and the veterans, tired with arduous labors, adjourned to a royal feast that had been spread for them amid brilliant surroundings. The decorations of the nall were elaborate and beautiful, and the supper was elegantly served. All the delegates to the Grand Camp were present, with many distinguished guests, and members of the two Richmond camps. A delegation from the Sons of Veterans, composed of Messrs. E. P. Cox, L. W. Brander, J. S. Bosher, W. J. Morrissette, J. H. Shepherd, Jr., W. C. Tucker, J. W. Lockwood, Jr., A. H. Bowie, Edwin Courtney, L. B. Spence, and P. St. George Barraud, was also invited to be present.

SPEAKS FOR VIRGINIA.

Judge Christian was the toastmaster, and he performed the duties of his office admirably. The first toast of the eve-ning was "Virginia," and in the absence of Governor O'Ferrall, Colonel Porter reof Governor O'Ferrail, Colonel Force re-sponded. He said every county of Vir-ginia was a part of a great whole, and, in speaking of one part, he spoke of the whole. He then spoke of the beauty and the hospitality of the city of Richmond, and the love felt for her by every Confederate soldier, and the feeling, the "old 'eeling," which came to each one of them as they trod again her historic streets. He culogized the soldiers of Virginia, and said he hoped the time would never come when the example of Pickett's and Mahone's men would not be emulated.

General Battle was next introduced, and spoke eloquently in response to a toast to "the infantry." It had not been his fortune, he said, to be born on the soil of Virginia, but he had had the honor of virginia, but he had had the honor of bringing the first troops of the South into the State. Early in 1851 he had led the First Alabama regiment to Lynchburg. He alluded with much feeling to the time when he had been a burg. He alluded with industry the time when he had been nursed back to life by the women of Richmond in the hospitals of the city. The infantry had been upon a hundred fields, and had marched through the valley of the shadow of death into the sunlit mountains of victory. He maintained that there was no greater evidence of valor than existed where the infantry figured in Pickett's Brigade at Gettysburg. gave as a concluding sentiment, "Jeffer-son Davis, second only to Washington, and Robert E. Lee, the foremost man

The artillery, he said, had no opportunity for individual distinction. There were four men round a gun, and no one man could go farther than another. He challenged his hearers to tell when any gun in the army of Northern Virginia funked or failed. The artillerymen, he said, were peculiarly situated, because they couldn't said, were pecually their guns with they couldn't carry their guns with them. Comparatively speaking, he said there were more men connected with the artillery whose names were household words than any other branch of

General Fitzhugh Lee, who was to have responded for the cavalry, was unable to be present, and Captain John Lamb took his place. He said that no one more than he regretted the absence of his commander. I honor to represent rangers. The history of buttermilk never yet been written, he said, and he told of many engagements in which the gallant Fitzhugh Lee and his command had borne a noble part, of Stuart, Longstreet, of Rosser, and of ot noted cavalry leaders. LEE AND JACKSON. The next toast was "The Memory of General R. E. Lee," and coupled with it was the sentiment, "Some men write history; some make it; he was one and for all time. His stainless record shall stand out sublime. A theme for min-strelsy." Judge Christian called upon strelsy.' J. William Jones to respond. He said if all that might be said of the peerless soldier of the ages, R. E. Lee, was spoken, he would have to detain his hearers for a very, very long time. No truer, nobler, or grander men had been produced than leaders of the South. He believed, was prepared to maintain on any platform, that Robert E. Lee was the greatest soldler that time had ever shown. The proprietor of the antiquarium at Washington's Headquarters, the old stone house on lower Main street, exhibits two very interesting letters. One is over General R. E. Lee's signature, and the other to General Grant from General Sherman. General Lee's letter is addressed to General Grant, and the subject matter relates to the exchange of c'tizen prisoners. It was written in 1885. These letters were procured for the antiquarium from the gentleman to whom General Grant gave them in person. was a man, and as a man, perhaps, He had the privilege after Lee's death of free access to his papers, and he saw letters to his wife, daughters, sons, and had read probably 2,000 of his private let-ters, and he could say that the closer

"The Women of the South-our inspiration and guardian angels in war, our supand comfort in peace, they have taught, and are still teaching, us what true loyalty to principle is, and how to uffer and be strong in adversity," was a sentiment that was very happily re-sponded to by Judge Farrar. In the course of his speech, which was eminently characteristic of "Johnny Reb," he ran the whole gamut of emotions, and in an illuminative way he paid a tribute, tender, indeed, and eloquent, to the The last regular toast was "The Dead South," and Rev. The proceedings were brought to a close by Captain Frank Cunningham, who sang with much feeling a pretty ballad entitled, "Our Mother's Way."

The Features of To-Day.

The Grand Camp will be called to order at 11 o'clock to-day, and at noon the grand parade will start for the Soldiers' Home, where the final act of the interesting drama will take place. The reunion at the home promises to be one of the pleasantest features of all that have transpired at this meeting. Not have transpired at this meeting. Not only will the three grand camps that have met here during the past two days be present on this occasion, but all the Con-federate associations of the city will be there.

The Sons of Veterans will figure conspicuously in the day's proceedings, turn ing over the cottage, built by the energy and industry of Lee Camp's Sons, to the Board of the Soldiers' Home. Following this ceremony General Lee, Judge Farrar, and other prominent gentlemen will de liver short addresses, and the visitors will then be entertained to luncheon.

It has been decided, in view of the re cent rains, to hold the exercises in large mess hall of the home.

NEW YORK CITY CAMPAIGN.

Great Low Meeting-Henry George-

Van Wyck-Tracy. NEW YORK, October 21 .- A demonstration in favor of Seth Low's candidacy for Mayor took place in Carnegie Hall to-night. A tremendous throng was present. The most remarkable feature of the meeting was the fact that it was not billed as a "Citizens' Union" gathering, but as a Republican meeting, being held under the auspices of the Republican organization (anti-Platt) of the city of New York.

About one-third of the audience was composed of women. Enthusiasm fairly bubbled over, and when the familiar features of Mayor Strong appeared at the bottom of the stairway leading to the stage the whole house stood up and cheered. Immediately behind the Mayor came the familiar features of Seth Low. The first glimpse of the candidate set the house wild.

Seth Low was next introduced. Such a storm of applause as arose has rarely been heard in Carnegie Hall. Mr. Low's speech was an amplification of the addresses that he has been delivering dresses that he has been delivering throughout the entire campaign. He re-ferred to Mr. Platt as a citizen of Oswego, and to Mr. Croker as a "frequenter of the English race track," and called on his hearers to vote for home-rule.

"NEXT SENATOR FROM NEW YORK." Joseph H. Choate was cheered more heartily than any speaker other than the Mayor, and was referred to as "the next senator from New York." His speech set the crowd fairly wild. Speaking of Senator Platt, he said: "He does not be long to New York city, and thank God York does not belong to him.

Robert A. Van Wyck, the Democratic nomince for Mayor, was slated for a speech at a meeting to-night at the Jefferson club-house, but he failed to put in an appearance. Instead, however, he sent a letter, which was read to the audience. It was an attack on the present city administration.

General Benjamin F. Tracy, the Re publican candidate for Mayor, to-night made his first speech in the Borough of the Bronx. The meeting was attended by about 2,000 persons. General Tracy and the other candidates were enthusiastically received.

A very bad impression has been made here by the news from Habana that a majority of the important industrial, commercial, mining, railway, and steamship enterprises in Cuba are being rapidly converted into foreign companies, chiefly American and English. It is feared that this may enable the companies to claim damages from Spain for losses during the

Perhaps a further reason why people are seeking English and American pro-tection is that Cuban capitalists fear the further disorder which will follow immediately on the proclamation of Cuban in-dependence, when the time comes for it.

Virginia Estimates. WASHINGTON, October 21 .- General

Wilson, Chief of Engineers of the Army, issued his annual report to the Secretary of War. It is devoted to the fortifications and the river and harbor improvements of the country. The estimates for coast defence for the years 1898-'99 are as follows: Gun and mortar batteries, $5.600, 000; purchase of land for fortifications $500,000; protection, preservation, and re-pair of fortifications, $100,000; preparation of plans for fortifications, $5,000; seawalls and embankments, $55,000; torpedoes for harbor defence, for the purchase of submarine mines, and the necessary appli ances to operate them; for closing the channels leading to our principal seaports; for needful casemates, cable gal-

$5,810,000. To this is added $41,000 for the engineer depot at Willett's Point, N. Y. On the subject of fortifications, the re-leries, etc., to render it possible to operate submarine mines, $150,000. Total,

The system of sea-coast defence now in progress of construction is based upon the report of the Board of Fortifications and other defences appointed by the President under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1885. The report of this board, generally known as the Endicott Board, was published in 1886.

Under instructions from the Chief of Engineers, dated March 29, 1885, the Board of Engineers undertook the study and preparation of detailed projects for the artiflery and submarine-mine defence of the principal sea and lake ports of the United States. Up to the present time projects have been prepared, and have received the approval of the Secretary of War, for many ports, among which are the following:

he following: Hampton Roads, Virginia; Wilmington,

Hampton Roads, Virginia; Wilmington, N. C.; Charleston, S. C.; Savannah, Ga.; Key West and Pensacota, Fla.; New Orleans, La., and Galveston, Tex.

Projects for the defence of other ports are still under consideration.

The great range of modern high-power guns compels the establishment of defensive lines at distances from the choss and harbors considerably greater than heretofore deemed necessary. At many harbors, the sites of the older-type works are at distances from the objects to be protected insufficient to admit of a proper defence under modern conditions. At other harbors, the areas of the older sites, when otherwise suitable, are too small to accommodate the modern defence. The acquisition of suitable sites. other harbors, the areas of the oder sites, when otherwise suitable, are too small to accommodate the modern defence. The acquisition of suitable sites has, therefore, been a necessary feature of the construction of a modern system of sea-coast defence. During the past flocal year title has been obtained to sites at Portland, Me.; eastern entrance to Long Island sound; Baltimore, Md.; Charleston, S. C.; Key West, Fla., Galveston, Tex.; San Diego, Cal., and Puget sound, Washington. Negotiations are still in progress for sites at Portland, Me.; Roston, Mass.; Narragansett bay, Rhode Island; eastern entrance to Long Island sound; Key West, Galveston, and Puget sound. Washington. All available funds for the purchase of sites for seacoast defences have been pledged. The operations attending the acquisition of sites are frequently attended by tedious and unavoidable delays. An appropriation of $500.000 is earnestly requested, to continue the purchase of sites.

Congress authorized the contract tem in work on fortifications, but it not approved by General Wilson.

RIVERS AND HARBORS.

General Wilson says that during the fiscal year ending June 20, 1897, there was expended on river and harbor improvements $13,461,355, For the fiscal year ending June 20, 1899, his estimates are: Continuous work authorized by Congress, $18,876,007; for further work not provided for by continuing contracts, $29,42,153.

The principal estimates in a number of the States follow:

Virginia—James river, $409,000: Norfok harbor, $56,774; Nansemond river, 20,600; Appomattox river, $30,000; Cape Charles City harbor, $10,000.

North Carolina—Roanoke river, $41,000; Pamileo and Tar rivers, $38,500; Cape Fear river below Wilmington, $250,000. RIVERS AND HARBORS.
